

Social identity groups are based on physical, social, and mental characteristics of individuals. They are sometimes obvious and clear, sometimes not obvious and unclear, often self-claimed and frequently ascribed by others. For example, racial groupings are often ascribed as well as self-claimed. Government, schools, and employers often ask an individual to claim a racial identity group or simply ascribe one to an individual based on visual perception. Other social identities are personally claimed but not often announced or identified.

For the purpose of this self-examination please identify the memberships you claim or those ascribed to you. Below are examples of social identity groupings but do not reflect the identity as a whole.
